Introduction

Welcome to our Staycation Inspiration Guide for 2021.

With calls from the Government to 'keep summer holidays simple', many of us are planning staycations this year. That means many UK destinations will be busier than ever. Why not create the ultimate family holiday bubble and take to the road for a camping holiday in a motorhome, caravan or campervan?

Many holidaymakers wishing to book a pitch for their tent or leisure vehicle are finding it almost impossible to find a destination. Many of the well known destinations like those local to us in Devon and Cornwall are booking up fast and are going to be busier than usual, once again risking overcrowding and discontent for holidaymakers and local residents.

So, in an effort to make things easier for potential staycationers, we have launched this 'Staycation Inspiration' guide with details of very useful websites with thousands of campsites and free resources as well as destinations to consider in the UK such as the Jurassic Coast, Gower Peninsular, Norfolk and Northumberland. All are fantastic places to explore by road this year.

A leisure vehicle such as a campervan or motorhome provides the ultimate way to both travel and holiday as a bubble. Our very own motorhome hire fleet at Motorhome Holiday Company is expected to be in for another exceptionally busy year. So whether you own your own motorhome, are looking to hire or are considering dragging the tent out of the shed for the first time in a while, this guide is for you.

We have visited many of these destinations ourselves and use the website resources we suggest to plan our own trips. You will find stacks of useful information, planning tools, checklists and destination resources all available for free on many of the websites we recommend.

We are passionate about inspiring people to experience their staycation holiday in places they may not have immediately thought about this year. This widens your holiday choice and also prevents overcrowding of beauty spots. So take the plunge and choose a destination that perhaps has always been on 'that list' but never visited or a head to a completely new holiday destination.

We trust you will enjoy this guide and find the travel tips and signposts useful and an invaluable resource as you plan your 2021 staycation.

Enjoy the Journey.

WHERE WILL YOU GO?

We're often asked for hints and tips for motorhome itineraries and adventures. The choice is yours, but we're building a list of our personal favourites – and those of our regular customers – throughout the UK and across Europe and we're always happy to share our ideas and experiences with you.

We advise all our customers to plan, although not too rigidly. It's important to have an idea of your destination and route (minding low bridges and narrow lanes!) while remaining flexible to allow inspiration to strike at short notice.

There are plenty of helpful websites we can offer you, but we suggest not packing in too much and enjoying a few days in each stopover point. It is a holiday, after all. And there's always next time...

Explore the Jurassic Coast

In 2001, UNESCO declared the Jurassic Coast – a 95 mile stretch of Devon and Dorset's hugely diverse and exquisite landscape – as a World Heritage Site for the outstanding universal value of its rocks, fossils and landforms in order to preserve and protect it for future generations.

Though under 100 miles, it's easy to lose an entire week in this ancient region that offers travellers the opportunity to find undiscovered fossils, literary heavyweights, picturesque seaside towns and access to larger towns inland if you require a hint of metropolis – though why would you?

Starting at Exmouth (about half an hour from the city of Exeter), you're a stone's throw from the National Trust's A la Ronde sixteen-sided country house, the beautiful beach of Sandy Bay that stretches to Budleigh Salterton and, just a little inland, Bicton Botanical Gardens. And that's a day consumed right there! Heading east, you'll pass through the coastal town of Sidmouth – famous for its folk festival in July/August (and a motorhome is a must for that, as accommodation is in short supply that week!) – on your way to Seaton Down, via the donkey sanctuary and Beer Quarry Caves, if you fancy a slight detour.

Less than ten miles further on is the historic town of Lyme Regis, and you'll want to stop here for sure. The breath-taking scenery and the crashing waves across The Cobb – made famous by that scene with Meryl Streep in The French Lieutenant's Woman – are sufficient to capture the attention. A stout walk inland will take you to John Fowles' (author of the source novel) house with a view across the sea. Is literature your bag? Lyme Regis has strong connections to Jane Austin, Beatrix Potter, Sir John Betjeman and J.R.R. Tolkien if you care to investigate. Staying with the arts, Turner and Whistler are just two of the many painters to have produced revered works here.

Lyme Regis offers distinctive beaches to suit the whims and needs of sand-loving families, strolling couples and intrepid palaeontologists alike. It was here, of course, that in 1811 Mary Anning discovered the first Ichthyosaur, the story of which you'll find in the Dinosaur Museum. While such a find might be rare, there are still plenty of ammonites awaiting discovery, and regular guided fossil walks on offer.

Scoot along through Charmouth and Seatown to West Bay (and Burton Bradstock) for a flavour of the BBC's Broadchurch, which was largely shot here and around Bridport. If you time it right and the tide is on your side, you can walk along Chesil Beach (referred to as Dead Man's Bay by Thomas Hardy, due to the occurrence of shipwrecks) all the way to Portland. It's an 18-mile jaunt, but worth the effort.

If you have children with you, there's a tradition of rolling down the hill and playing Pooh sticks that must be followed – it's the law! For those packing hiking boots, there's a beautiful circular walk or a ten-mile hike across the roof of Purbeck to Old Harry Rocks, the official end of the Jurassic Coast. And if the return trip is a little too daunting, there's the option of taking either a bus or the Swanage Railway back to Corfe.

Providing someone stays behind to meet you with your motorhome, after Portland Bill, the next stop is Weymouth. It was good enough for King George III to holiday here so it must be worth a look, if only for the fine Georgian Esplanade that serves as an impressive backdrop to the long, sandy arc of Weymouth Beach.

On the next stretch east, you can enjoy 'collecting' the quirky names and sights of Bat's Head, Durdle Door, Man O'War Beach, Stair Hole and Lulworth Cove, the last of which is a wonderful place to spend the night and enjoy an early morning swim before the local holidaymakers descend.

From Lulworth, you're less than 20 miles from Swanage, and that's including a stop at Corfe Castle, another National Trust gem. With over a thousand years of history, this castle has been shaped by warfare, having been a Saxon stronghold, Norman fortress, royal palace and eventually a family home.

Take it Easy in Norfolk

If the mere thought of those hikes in Devon and Dorset has worn you out, why not take a road trip around the rather flatter Norfolk and its famous man-made broads, national park (the only one in the UK containing a city!) and over 125 miles of lock-free waterways – though we'd recommend not taking the motorhome into those.

There's no logical route to follow, but there are a remarkable number of must-visit spots, whether you're seeking the town life vibrancy or the rural escape. Norwich is an obvious experience, complete with its cathedral, castle, the Sainsbury Centre for the Visual Arts, miles of streets filled with shops and restaurants and, of course, Carrow Road Stadium, home of Norwich FC.

TELEPHONE - 0117 290 9000

About 40 miles north west, you'll find King's Lynn (and The Wash a stone's throw – or a Pooh stick's voyage along the River Great Ouse – further on), a town rich in maritime history. On the quayside there are giant boat chains and, close by, a statue of Captain George Vancouver, who mapped the west coast of America in the 18th Century. Apparently, he has an island and city named after him in Canada, though we'll be damned if we can remember which one.

No motorhome holiday in Norfolk is complete without at least a couple of days on the coast in Great Yarmouth. Whether you're a family in search of shows and attractions along the fabled Golden Mile (the beachside promenade that's packed with life and people living it to the full) or a couple choosing midnight strolls along the 15 miles of beaches, there's plenty here for everyone to create a few memories.

As well as being East Anglia's premier beach resort (visitors have been coming here since the late 1700s), Great Yarmouth is famous for once being the hub of the herring industry and, as with King's Lynn, has plenty of maritime history to discover. But if you want to experience water in the present day, you'd do well to visit Breydon Water, a scenic expanse that is fed by the Rivers Yare, Bure and Waveney and flows into The Wash. It's a haven for sailing or just a well-earned break from the high-energy beach resorts.

More than anything, though, Great Yarmouth is all about the fun: riding giant snails, playing adventure golf, munching freshly-cooked doughnuts, meeting them again on the scream-inducing rollercoaster, go-kart racing, the Britannia Pier and Hippodrome Circus, taking in the evening shows... Believe us, it belongs on the bucket list of UK visits.

As you're leaving King's Lynn, why not pop in and see if Her Majesty is in residence at her Sandringham Estate. Just tell her we sent you and we're sure she'll pop the kettle on. Even if she isn't home to greet you, the house is well worth a few hours to explore, the estate boasts over 400 acres of country park and gardens, and there are numerous events throughout the year from apple picking, fungal forays, illumination trails, outdoor theatre and concerts.

Hide Away Off Grid in Dartmoor

There is a particular joy to be had from leaving the world behind and revelling in a long weekend without seeing a streetlight, fast food restaurant or crowd. It's why we love our motorhome escapes into the wilds. With our well-equipped, fully stocked motorhomes, you now have the opportunity to truly escape civilisation for a few days. You can even have your supplies delivered by Ocado to us, and we'll put them inside ready for your arrival so that you can avoid the stress of shopping.

In Scotland, off grid camping is perfectly legal, providing you follow the Scottish Outdoor Access Code. In England and Wales, however, you must have the landowner's permission or it's illegal, except for the Lake District and parts of Dartmoor, which suits us as it's just about our favourite off-grid destination.

Dartmoor National Park covers 386 miles of unsullied moors, tors, rivers and trails and is an idyllic escape whether you want to ramble, fish, cycle, ride a horse or engage in the 150-year-old hobby of letterboxing. The first letterbox was introduced in the middle of North Moor in 1854. It took 40 years for the second to reach Belstone Tor, but there are now hundreds scattered across the moor willing you to discover them and stamp your journal.

Dartmoor National Park truly is a beautiful place to explore. On our many treks we've wandered around ancient ruins, visited an abbey, got up close and personal with llamas, been wild swimming in hidden pools and rivers, lost ourselves in the music of waterfalls, ambled around reservoirs, visited the farm that inspired Michael Morpurgo's Warhorse and treated ourselves to a steam train ride. It's all there, waiting for you.

For families why not head to River Dart Country Park; 90 acres of adventure and watery fun for all the family. Packed with an adventure playground, Commando assault course, wooden fort, zip wires, climbing pods, agility trail, bounce zone and bike park, a day won't be sufficient to experience everything. Camp onsite and have full use of all the facilities.

We'd love to tell you about our trips around Snowdonia, the Lake District and the Pennines. There isn't space here, but believe us, they are also worth the trip.

Wherever you go, don't forget to plan ahead. We always recommend booking campsites ahead of time. Joining a campsite club like the Camping and Caravanning Club is a great idea. Although you are able to live 'off-grid' in a motorhome for several days at a time, campsites offer motorhomers a relaxing stopover to restock water tanks and charge batteries. A sensible approach if this is your first time exploring in a motorhome.

The great joy of using a motorhome or campervan for an epic road trip is that you can take your time to not simply see, but truly experience this wonderful country of ours. Over the years, perhaps the most popular regions for a motorhome holiday with us have been Gower, Cornwall and the Lake District, but we've had more than a few regular customers who have taken the opportunity to spend months seeing the whole of the UK and, consequently, they've had the time to reach England's northernmost county, Northumberland.

Discover Northumberland

Due entirely to its location in relation to the Motorhome Holiday Company (it's about 350 miles north of us), few seem to make that trek, though the rewards are immense for those who do head north. With stops for food and comfort breaks, it's probably a seven- or eight-hour journey to the south border of Northumberland, but why not make the journey up there part of your holiday and stop off for a night or two? If you take the M5/M1/A1 route, you'll have plenty of options just a short drive off your route, and we've tended to take a night each in the Peak District National Park and the North York Moors National Park, with maybe a night in Scarborough for a trip to the Stephen Joseph Theatre.

The obvious starting point is Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and once there a visit to Sir Antony Gormley's Angel of the North is a must. Don't just glance at it as you drive past on the A1, go and stand at its foot and look skyward to absorb the full majesty. At twenty metres tall and with a whopping 54 metre wingspan, it's Britain's largest sculpture, and a sight you'll never forget.

One could spend many days in the city as there is so much to see and do, even for non-football fans, though a tour around St James Park Stadium is well worth the effort – just make sure you bolt on a rooftop tour, too. Beyond football, if you time it right, you have two major rugby teams to watch and the Great North Run to experience, whether you run or observe.

Beyond the sport in Newcastle, there is an array of theatre, live music and clubs to while away your evenings, whilst daytime options include museums, galleries, a trip to the castle or a round or two of crazy golf. And you could consider an afternoon tour of one of the many independent and microbreweries in preparation for your night on the town.

Leaving Newcastle, it's well worth spending some time driving north to enjoy the 30 miles of beaches that line the Northumberland coast. The first stop is Blyth, a bustling port town rich in history and gifted with its own lighthouse, golden sand, coloured beach huts and the rather grander National Trust's Seaton Delaval Hall, an English Baroque country house and gardens that has, for 900 years, been a stage for drama, intrigue and romance.

There are countless spots to visit along the coast that we could detail here, many of which are classed as Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty. These include Craster, home to the best of British Kippers and Bamburgh voted Britains' favourite seaside destination in a survey by the consumer group Which? But for now we'll advance to the Holy Island of Lindisfarne, where in 635AD Saint Aidan came from Iona to found his monastery. The island boasts a population of just 160, but that swells considerably with 650,000 global visitors annually. Though many come for the historical links to Christianity, even more visit for the ornithology, fishing, natural history, sailing, writing retreats, or in homage to a certain folk band.

Driving inland, you'll swap the views across the North Sea for the spectacular scenery of the Northumberland National Park, starting with the Cheviot Hills. Formed from cooled lava millions of years ago, they have a distinctive rounded appearance that belie the dramatic delights within. If waterfalls are your thing, you'll love the eighteen-metre drop of the Linhope Spout and, if your preference is for cooling hot feet in still waters, the tucked-away ponds of Wooler Common will be an absolute gift. It's here in the Cheviot Hills that you can trudge along the Border Ridge and Pennine Way, taking in the views from The Cheviot, Northumberland's highest point. We'd also recommend a stop at the remains of the region's largest Iron Age hillfort at Yeavinger Bell for an unspoilt place to roam peacefully.

Heading south west, the Kielder Water and Forest Park is a delight, being home to Europe's largest man-made lake and England's largest forest. Mile upon mile of purpose-built trails will lead you through a haven of wildlife that reportedly includes almost half of England's native red squirrels as well as ospreys, roe deer, pipistrelle bats, water voles, salmon and otters.

The 26-mile Lakeside Way trail is multi-use and so you'll share it with walkers, cyclists and horse riders while it's also suitable for wheelchair users, ensuring the natural beauty is within reach of everyone. For the sporty motorhomer, it's worth noting that the lake attracts waterskiing and sailing enthusiasts all year round and offers a wonderful challenge to trout anglers between March and October.

No trip to Northumberland is complete without a visit to Hadrian's Wall. Though the 84-mile Hadrian's Wall Path stretches coast to coast from Bowness-on-Solway in the west to Wallsend in the east, a fair portion runs through the south of Northumberland. We can't recommend enough the full walk, although you'll need to leave someone in the motorhome to meet you at the end of each day. But even for the casual walker, it's an opportunity to walk a small portion of the trail.

Depending on which section you sample, you'll have the opportunity to experience bath houses, ramparts, live excavations, Roman forts and museums, spectacular landscapes, rare wildlife, exquisite solitude and cosy, welcoming pubs at the end of a day's walking. You can also enjoy Hadrian's Wall by bike along the Hadrian's Cycleway, and a year-round bus route offers glimpses of the historical trail to those less able to walk or cycle.

When you're done with the hiking, why not drive east to Haltwhistle, the exact centre point of Britain? Naturally, there are plenty of walking options here, too, including 22 circular walks through historic countryside bordering the town, but Haltwhistle is a picturesque town to catch your breath, rest your feet and recharge with local produce and tipples in the many quirky pubs, teashops and restaurants.

Further east, on your way back to Newcastle, you might want to experience the imposing stone cube of Hexham's Old Gaol, which was built in 1333 as England's first purpose-built prison. Just steel yourself for four floors of the prison's gruesome history and infamous inhabitants.

Fifteen miles further on, Corbridge offers a far gentler experience at the end of your road trip. Way back in 1827, Corbridge was rated as a shopper's paradise. Though the shops are different now, the reputation remains, and its pretty high street offers a plethora of small shops with decorated fronts. And for those in the party not so keen on shopping, there's yet more history to investigate and more than one local hostelry that will be delighted to entertain you. If you plan ahead, the Corbridge Festival in July offers visitors three days of music, street theatre, stalls and a beer tent offering a range of ale, cider and wine.

Wherever your motorhome takes you in Northumberland, it's an experience that will have you wondering why you never visited before.

Visit Gower

The Gower Peninsula is renowned as a fantastic holiday destination for families, couples and individual travellers alike. With vast stretches of coastline, beautiful beaches, lakes, rivers and moorland, large parts resemble Cornwall, but it's a far quieter destination, which makes it a genuine escape from daily life. But don't think for a minute there's nothing to do in Gower beyond building sandcastles (though there's plenty of scope for that!).

Three Cliffs Bay and Nicholaston Farm are our campsite destinations of choice. Both have great facilities and are within easy walking distance to all the beautiful beaches. Three Cliffs Bay particularly, has spectacular views across the ever-changing beach below and because it's not ideal for swimming across the full bay, it's never uncomfortably crowded. It's a great point for short walks over the dunes, the golf course and heath inland, and has proved the perfect start and end point for a coastal path trek to Rhossili Bay – and back! But be warned: the round trip was 32 miles – 9 hours at a fair pace! One way suits most people, and there are regular bus or taxi options to make the return.

Along the coastal path or a short drive west, you'll reach Oxwich Bay, which is a TMHC family favourite, has restaurants and campsites to hand, and even has a motorhome-friendly car park. It really is a long, beautiful stretch of sand (backed by dunes and a nature reserve) that's perfect for an early morning or late evening stroll with the dog.

There really are too many small, secluded bays to mention, but for the intrepid explorer who isn't afraid of a hike through gorse and the odd rocky descent, there are some absolute gems to stumble across.

If it's award-winning beaches you're after, then Rhossili Bay is a must, being the only European beach to make Suitcase's Top Ten Beaches in the World list. Not a single beach in Spain, France or Greece made it to the list that includes Miami's South Beach and Honokalani Beach in Hawaii. Comprising three miles of golden sand, the beach encompasses Worms Head, one of Gower's most famous landmarks, and lies within the first designated Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty in the UK. It's as popular with the surfers as it is with sunbathers.

Although remote, the bay is easily accessible, with a National Trust car park at the top that also caters for motorhome parking.

From the same car park, Mewslade Beach is a short walk – though it's only visible at low tide – and is well worth a visit. The rocks on the beach create an almost lunar landscape with cliff faces of Cathedral proportions.

Away from the sand, The Mumbles is a hugely popular day trip, whether you're looking for tea and cake, a good evening meal or a spot of souvenir hunting. Situated on the edge of Swansea, it offers the best of both worlds with the seascape to admire and easy access to metropolis should you need a good film or some indoor entertainment. As you'd expect from a large town, there's no shortage of shopping opportunities or entertainment with its beautiful parks, museums (including a waterfront museum) and great array of restaurants, both family-suited chains, and bijou family-run independents.

Festivals for the Refined

The summer is the time for music festivals, but there is still plenty of festival fun to experience through the autumn. October welcomes the annual, world-renowned Cheltenham Literature Festival or, if you'd prefer to stay local to the Motorhome Holiday Company, there's the Bristol Festival of Literature a couple of weeks later. Then, of course, there's another opportunity to rub shoulders with Hollywood's great and good at the BFI London Film Festival. And with London hotel prices rocketing for the event, a rental motorhome offers you home comforts and freedom at a fraction of the cost.

Tour Scotland

Customers love to tour the highlands and breeze along the traffic-free open roads. For such a small country, there's a vast amount of open land to explore, and with off-grid camping an option in Scotland, there really are very few obstacles in the way of a great adventure. If you let us know your plans in advance, we can ensure your motorhome will fit on one of the ferries, which opens up the Hebrides and Western Isles, too. We can also offer some great advice on wild camping in Scotland to ensure you stay on the right side of the law.

TV Tours

If you like stargazing of a different kind, the autumn is a popular season with production companies shooting films and TV series for broadcast in the coming spring and summer. It's no secret that many hit shows (hint: Poldark) are shot in Cornwall, which gives you yet another reason to enjoy an autumn holiday road trip through those winding lanes to revisit where Aidan and the cast spent those long months filming. And we know our motorhomes are happy coasting around the Cornish lanes because we supplied the motorhomes for Poldark which were used as greenrooms and changing rooms for the stars.

Carnival Hopping

Rio might have the biggest carnival in the world and the Notting Hill Carnival might offer a multi-cultural summer party, but if you want something closer to home to warm your hearts in the autumn months, the West Country is renowned for its own take on carnivals. Many towns and villages across the south west have carnival clubs that spend an entire year planning and building floats ready for the season, which consists of at least fifteen carnivals in Somerset alone. Our top tips for the biggest are Bridgewater and North Petherton. You'll need to arrive early to nab your favoured viewpoint (and, no, we're not divulging ours), but with one of our motorhomes, you can eat, drink and be merry in the warm while the crowds enviously stamp their feet and hug paper cups of tea outside.

Perfect Your Photography

Looking further ahead, the winter solstice offers motorhomers and photographers alike incredible opportunities to match light and photography with our heritage. Whether you join the throng at Stonehenge or Avebury, there's a definite attraction to hiding out in one of our heated motorhomes with a fresh brew until the critical moment when the sun hits those stones for your perfect shot. For that matter, why not spend your autumn motorhome holiday road-tripping around the UK's stone circles and ley line monuments, starting just ten minutes away from the Motorhome Holiday Company, with Stanton Drew stone circle?

Where to Stay

Finding a Campsite

You've decided to hire a motorhome from the Motorhome Holiday Company (and we commend you on your excellent decision), it's booked and paid for, and you've plotted the route of your road trip, but where do you stay?

The first thing to consider is whether you'd like a campsite, to stay off-grid for some wild camping, or a mixture of the two. If you're away for more than a few days, you'll need to plug in to a hook-up periodically to recharge the batteries (and also refill the fresh water and empty the waste tank and toilet cassette), but off-grid camping is a pure joy to experience if you're looking for a genuine escape from humanity.

If wild camping is your thing, it's worth noting that you'll need the landowner's permission to stop overnight and you must be aware of local laws about overnight stopping.

Most people planning a motorhome holiday choose to spend their road trip on campsites. This is what we recommend. The question is then what type of campsite do you want to enjoy. A remote simple setup with a view or a campsite geared up for families with play parks, swimming pool and clubhouse. Some even have evening entertainment too. The choice is yours.

When you hire from Motorhome Holiday Company, you automatically enjoy membership of the Camping & Caravan Club Privilege Scheme for the duration of your hire, which gives you access to over 100 exclusive sites across the UK. To book, you must call them during office hours. We will give you the details when your dates are confirmed.

If that's too limiting, we tend to say that Google is your friend, that way there's every possibility you'll find an absolute gem that we don't know about (if so, please give us the details upon your return). However, we have a handful of favoured websites that we point our customers to, and we're confident you'll be spoilt for choice when you look through them. Here's our secret seven top websites... ## 2. www.searchforsites.co.uk

This is a far broader resource as it isn't restricted to exclusive campsites and motorhome stopovers, but lists almost 39,000 places across Europe, boasts 92,000 photos, has 80,000 reviews and a membership of nearly 150,000 and growing! All of which gives you a pretty good idea that it's a resource well worth utilizing. There's even an app for that!

If you are a subscriber to the searchforsites app, you can get all the data on to your satellite navigation devices along with suitable custom icons (available in different formats for Garmin & TomTom devices).

A brilliant website resource being regularly updated by members. The mobile phone app is free for a trial period before a lowly £6 per year subscription is required. Worth every penny in our view.

3. www.park4night.com

This is a simpler community website that allows members to share their favoured stopover spots and campsites around the globe. There are even two listed in Guatemala, though we're not sure you'll get that far in a weeks holiday. At the other end of the scale, there are 49,000 recommendations for France.

The search facility is great - just type in a city and all of the campsites and overnight stopover spots are highlighted. Easy to use and again, free to use!

4. www.coolcamping.com

Though limited to England, Scotland, Wales, France, Ireland, Italy, Greece, Germany and Spain this is a website with a lovely 'feel' to it, packed with photos, guides and tips for glamping, camping and motorhoming around select parts of Europe. It details winter glamping, woodland campsites, campsites that welcome dogs and campfires and 'almost wild' camping opportunities.

On arrival at the homepage you are welcomed with a search bar that simply says, "Where do you want to go?"

A great website for searching campsites and more and best of all, it's free too!

5. www.campsites.co.uk

This is a UK-centric resource that focuses on the most popular regions in the UK (e.g. Cornwall, the Lake District, New Forest, Northumberland etc.) with Scotland and Wales getting a section each. There's even one dedicated to the Isle of Wight's 23 campsites. It filters the listed websites by 'those with glamping' and 'those with touring' and has a handy key of symbols to make your search easier.

Another free search tool for finding campsites in the UK.

6. www.ukcampsite.co.uk

A simple website that does what it says on the tin. It has a very handy clickthrough list of popular search terms and locations to make your research easier, and there's a page of current camping and holiday related competitions, which is worth a look.

Simple to use with a simple search facility. We've found a few lesser known campsites on this website so is definitely worth a look.

7. www.pitchup.com

Offering listings on over 2,500 holiday parks and campsites across the UK, Europe and Americas, it's not the biggest resource out there, but sometimes that's easier than searching for one particular straw in a hay barn. As with the best, there's a handy calendar for checking availability, a page on up-to-date caravan and camping deals, and a clickthrough list of popular searches.

The website has more of a travel agency feel with the ability to actually book campsites directly from it. A useful resource that is, once again, free to use.

So there you have it, our secret seven website tools to help you find your new favourite holiday destination.

SIX THINGS THAT CAN RUIN YOUR MOTORHOME HIRE HOLIDAY

...and how to avoid them

Your motorhome hire holiday should be relaxing, an adventure, a welcome break from the humdrum of life. Your motorhome holiday should be a time of reflection and the source of dreams, so how can you avoid it turning into a nightmare?

At Motorhome Holiday Company we have a catalogue of horror stories we've heard from customers who made the mistake of hiring their motorhome elsewhere. Using the dreadful experiences of those who have turned to us to restore their faith, we've compiled a list of six things that could ruin your motorhome holiday and how to avoid them.

No.1.

Do your research.

For most people, researching their first motorhome holiday rental comes down to asking a friend or making a quick Google search. If you have a fantastic personal recommendation, we can't argue with that. But Google searches don't provide all the information you need to avoid a motorhome holiday disaster. Don't forget to check Facebook, Trip Advisor and even Companies House.

Facebook, Google pages and Trip Advisor will give you an idea of customer satisfaction - or lack of - whilst Companies House can give you details of the company itself, its directors and any worrying patterns. If you spot the same directors with numerous companies providing the same service, it may imply a company trading under multiple names in order to hide bad reviews – or other nefarious actions.

Companies House will also provide information of the company's operation base. Before you book on-line, ensure there is an actual outlet from which the company operates. There are far, far too many anecdotes of unsuspecting customers paying for motorhomes or other holidays that don't actually exist. Ideally, make sure there are showrooms locally where you can visit in order to see the motorhomes available. Visiting the person or company to whom you are giving your hard-earned cash will give you a far better idea of the quality and service you will receive.

Never underestimate the value of gut instinct. Don't be just another name in a scammer's book of victims.

No.2.

Check their 'Plan B'.

As mentioned above, there are, sadly, too many companies that are willing to take your money with no intention of delivering the service they advertise. Even a small amount of investigation will expose a motorhome hire company presenting themselves as a substantial company when the reality is that they have very few motorhomes or, in the worst case, none.

In such an instance, even if the company is legitimate, what happens if the rental motorhome you've paid for returns from the previous hire damaged or unusable? What will the company do if you're ready with suitcases in hand but the motorhome hasn't returned at all? Even the best-intentioned customers can miss a ferry or be stuck at the wrong end of a closed motorway.

Before you confirm any motorhome or campervan holiday booking, check the company's contingency plan. How many motorhomes do they own? Is it part of a national network, franchise or joint venture that can source an alternative motorhome at short notice.

Confirm their breakdown policy.

Firstly, check the age and quality of the motorhome you're hiring. Many owners hire out their motorhomes privately at very competitive prices. Why? Mostly because they are older vehicles and the owner doesn't have the operating resources of a large, established and respectable company. Yes, you may pay less, but what happens when you phone the owner late at night, several hundred miles away, in the pouring rain and the motorhome has broken down?

Naturally, newer motorhomes are less likely to suffer a breakdown than older vehicles. Most new motorhomes come with up to three years of manufacturer and breakdown cover, which usually covers the UK and Europe through the RAC. As commercial breakdown cover in older vehicles can be expensive, many owners are not adequately covered, particularly when hiring out their vehicles, so it is always important to ask your hire company, "What happens if I break down?"

On a related issue with older motorhomes, make sure you check the efficiency and safety of the gas system, heating and even the chassis. Are they capable of serving you for the duration of your road-trip both adequately and safely? Is the motorhome Gas Safe certified? It's now a requirement for all motorhomes.

Are you legal to drive?

This isn't just about points on your licence, though it is imperative that you are honest about them in case the insurance policy is invalid. Many people don't realize that if they passed their driving test after 1st January 1997 they may not drive a vehicle over the weight of 3500kg. If, however, you passed prior to that date, you will have a C1 entitlement, which means you may drive a vehicle up to 7500kg. If you are unsure, check the reverse of your photocard driving licence, and always check the weight of any motorhome you hire before you confirm your booking.

Many drivers are also unaware that their C1 entitlement is automatically removed when they reach the age of 70 unless they have passed a medical examination. Many motorhome insurance policies cover drivers only between the 25 and 69 years, 364 days, so if you celebrate your 70th birthday during your hire period, you may not be insured and therefore not only liable for any breakdown and damage expenses but also to prosecution.

No.5.

How secure is your security deposit?

Security deposits are standard with any vehicle hire, and that's no different with motorhome and campervan rental. Typically, you can expect to pay a deposit of £1,000 for a lower-spec motorhome and up to £2,000 on a higher-spec motorhome or when taking it to an event where the excess may be inflated.

Usually, such deposits are payable either with your credit or debit card prior to departure, but do you know when your card will be credited or how much of your deposit you may be liable to lose in the event of something going wrong? Most reputable companies will promptly refund your deposit, but many will hold on to your deposit for a full thirty days or longer to cover any parking fines you may have incurred during the hire period. That, in turn, can lead to interest charged by your credit card provider or a reduced balance in the bank account linked to your debit card for longer than you might expect.

When asking your hire company about their security deposit terms, be sure to check what deductions you may face beyond damage and breakdown costs. Most hire companies will charge for refuelling if you don't return the motorhome with a full tank, and some have been known to charge as much as £150 for failing to return the motorhome with an empty toilet!

Read the small print for hidden charges.

It's very easy to ignore the small print, and most people do. But if you choose not to read it, you may find that you're stung with unexpected charges at the end of your motorhome holiday and don't have any legal comeback.

Firstly, the headline or advertised price is often not the final price you'll be charged. You know those budget airlines that advertise the cheapest prices and then hit you with charges for baggage, seating, food etc.? Certain motorhome holiday companies do the same thing. The general rule is that if it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

Always ask exactly what is included in the hire fee. Does the advertised price include insurance, breakdown cover, gas, toilet chemical, secure parking for your car whilst you are away etc.? There are often optional extras that you may not have considered, for example bedding, airport transfers, additional drivers, EU travel etc.

Is there a mileage limit?

A 'trick' pulled by some hire companies is to offer a low hire rate but with a mileage limit. Excess mileage is then charged at around £1 per mile or more.

As mentioned in reference to the security deposit, please ensure you check the small print for hidden return charges, particularly for returning your motorhome with an empty fuel tank and a full toilet.

If you want to avoid charges and receive your full deposit upon your return, always read the small print and the Ts & Cs.

We are building a business to be proud of... a business that thrives on creating great customer experiences every time.

We are proud to have received an ever growing number of positive reviews and 5* commendations (see website), have a rapidly growing fleet of motorhomes and are expanding across the UK with new centres planned for the near future. We also have close working relationships with a number of motorhome hire companies across the UK and Europe, and are an Adria Motorhome Service Partner. With access to a network of over 100 approved motorhome workshops across the UK we can keep our customers 'on the road' in the event of a problem.

Many of our hire motorhomes are less than 2 years old and are still under manufacturer warranty. Where this is not the case we have a commercial breakdown policy that features all the bells and whistles to ensure we can resolve any breakdown quickly and without drama.

We believe in consulting our customers on precise needs to ensure your holiday is the best it can be. This includes advising on the most suitable motorhome layout for your needs and checking your driving licence, allowing you to drive the motorhome of your choice.

A security deposit is a requirement of our insurers. The deposit is charged up to 48 hours before departure and refunded within 48 hours of your return.

We do NOT hold it for up to 6 weeks after your trip to protect against traffic violations or parking fines. In the event, we will simply contact you to request a full payment to cover the fine.

Our hire charges are simple, all-inclusive daily rates. We include everything you need to go away. No hidden charges and no additional costs. The only 'extras' you could invest in are optional. These include bedding, second drivers, EU travel and car seat hire.

Simple.

To be certain of a secure, honest and carefree adventure, email us at team@motorhomeholidaycompany.com or phone on +44 (0)117 290 9000 and we'll make sure nothing ruins your motorhome holiday.

AUTUMNAL INSPIRATION

Autumn is a time of change, of packing away the old and discovering the new. It's a time of motorhome breaks without the hordes of summer holidaymakers, when the intrepid can hit the moors, lakes, hills and plains in relative peace and shuffle through knee-deep drifts of crispy leaves without the scornful glare of 'grown-ups' who lost their sense of adventure eons ago.

At Motorhome Holiday Company, it's also when our tariff moves to the 'off-peak' prices and we welcome back our regular customers who pre-book their favourite motorhomes for long weekends and extended road trips to see the changing tree colours and tour the carnivals, firework displays and festivals of this season.

JOIN OUR MotorhomeEarn™ PROGRAM

Many of the motorhomes in our fleet are, in fact, privately owned. They earn money for their owners every time we hire them out for our many customers' adventures.

It's a simple and incredibly successful scheme that we launched in 2012, and we'd love you to be part of it. We're now expanding our hire business significantly both in terms of available motorhomes and satisfied (and returning) customers.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

Beautifully, simply, and effectively.

We've based it on the established luxury yacht rental programme, which has been phenomenally successful. Essentially, you buy a motorhome that is suitable for our fleet and then we hire it to our screened customers.

It's a symbiotic relationship that has triple benefits:

1. FOR YOU:

You earn in income from your motorhome when you're not using it and we look after it like it's our own in our CCTV monitored secure yard, freeing up your driveway for your car.

2. FOR US:

We increase our fleet with less capital tied up in vehicles, which makes us a more secure business for your partnership.

3. FOR OUR CUSTOMERS:

Our loyal customers have a wider choice as a result of our larger fleet and in turn have less risk of disappointment due to a full diary.

We take care of all the advertising, liaison and vetting of prospective customers. We obtain their IDs, manage payments of deposits, balances and security deposits. We then pay you 50% of the hire profits generated by your motorhome.

For more information, please get in touch with one of the team.

BUY FROM US

Throughout the year, we have a range of pre-loved motorhomes and campervans for sale. Many are ex-hire vehicles from our fleet, whilst some are quality used motorhomes that we've acquired but not had on hire.

We aim to replace every motorhome in our fleet after eighteen months of hire use, which gives us a regular supply of quality motorhomes to sell on the second-hand market at competitive rates.

We service all our motorhomes frequently and you'll see the care our skilled and conscientious team takes over them whenever you visit us.

Every motorhome we sell comes with a full service, habitation check and, where required, a fresh MOT. We also include a warranty with a third party supplier.

If it's a new motorhome you're after, we have an exclusive Try Before You Buy partnership with motorhome dealers throughout the UK. Our partnership allows you to rent a motorhome through us for a weekend away and then, if you decide to buy, the rental price is discounted from the purchase price. Whether you're in the market for a quality used motorhome or something brand spanking new, whether you're a first-time buyer or replacing a much-loved motorhome, we're here for you.

If you're uncertain, we're always happy to help and advise, and if you have a specific motorhome model or layout in mind we'll do our best to help you find it. We're constantly seeking motorhomes for sale and our standing in the industry often gives us privileged tip offs of available vehicles.
